Sprint 01 Reflection

For this 1st sprint, while it may have been my first time writing an automated testing suite, there are some things to note for myself. To start, the nature of the tests allowed for me to quickly write the various tests as they were all very similar in nature, with groups of tests only needing small changes to handle each situation. Of course, with that being said, there are still a few things I can do better for next time. To start, I could have taken some more time planning out each test in order to avoid redundancies. This would also help me keep track of each method/step and which test they are being used for.

For the sprint of this project, the biggest thing that needs work is to streamline the tests. While they do work, they could be made to run more efficiently which in turn would result in more clear test results allowing for a better understanding when the tests failed.
